Comments Regarding Professor

Professor Zilles is very nice. He tries to answer all the questions in the chat and make sure the material is clear to everyone before he moves on.

Comments Regarding Course Content

For me, I think CS 105 is challenging and I spent a lot of time reading the textbook. However, Professor Zilles and Max made some videos to help explain some muddy points, which I find very helpful for both coding and concepts.

Comments Regarding Professor

He was very knowledgeable about the topic and always willing to answer questions. Both the TA and professor were fun teachers who joked around occasionally.

Comments Regarding Course Content

The course content requires a lot of memorization of code because learning Python was similar to learning a new language. However, it wasn't extremely difficult because there would be example codes of how to use the code and what output it would generate.

Very passionate about teaching. Encourages class participation and will answer any questions you ask. Very personable and willing to help. Takes academic integrity seriously.

Comments Regarding Course Content

If you have previous experience (i.e. STAT 100/AP Statistics), you'll find the class more of a review with excel functions. However, if you're going in without statistics knowledge, the course is rather fast-paced in terms of learning. Don't need to be particularly good at math, but you have to understand the stats concepts to be successful.

Comments Regarding Professor

He is extremely passionate about data science and clearly has a great understanding of the subject matter. Always had a great attitude coming into class and willing to answer questions about any of the content. Often teaches by using a combination of lecturing with slides and working through lab notebooks during class. Very understanding and tries to be flexible with deadlines when appropriate.

Comments Regarding Course Content

Since there is no textbook, you must take good notes during class. The quizzes and exams are a lot harder in comparison to the lab notebooks and homework assignments. Use Peer Tutoring!

Comments Regarding Professor

My interaction with Professor Fisher was mostly just through watching the lecture videos but he is very understanding and eager to help if students reach out to him. If you are struggling in the class or have any questions, I would definitely recommend reaching out to him for help.

Comments Regarding Course Content

The course is pretty lecture heavy and relies a lot on individual studying. It starts out as conceptual but then goes further into solely math/accounting problems as you progress. I found that doing the homeworks and practice problems was the best way to study and learn.

Super laid-back lecture that is actually made interesting and enjoyable by the professor's upbeat teaching style.	50

Comments Regarding Professor

Super great professor that makes showing up to class worth it. He understands that BADM 320 shouldn't be a difficult class and follows through on that understanding.

Comments Regarding Course Content

The content is simple and can usually be deduced by utilizing logic.

Comments Regarding Professor

Very nice and not too strict on grading. He will provide an outline for the final group presentation which makes it a lot easier to prepare for.

Comments Regarding Course Content

The course is generally qualitative and is not too hard. Mainly consists of case readings. The midterm exams are easy as long as you know the concepts and follow along with the study guide. Need to put into some work for the group cases, and the final case presentation is around an hour in length.

Comments Regarding Professor

The professor was very kind and fun. His grading process was not the most clear, so we did not know our class performance until the end of the semester after final grades were released.

Comments Regarding Course Content

Course content was mostly a review from other business core classes, with a big emphasis on presentations. The class was not difficult but did require much team work.
